Doug Paris has always had a passion for the power of image. He earned his Bachelor's Degree in Education from Northeastern State University in Oklahoma. Later Paris earned an MBA in service firm marketing from Oklahoma City University. He began his career in the clothing industry as a buyer for a Tulsa clothing company. Later, from his office in the Dallas Apparel Mart, he became a wholesale representative for mills and manufacturers of high quality apparel for gentlemen and ladies. In 1994, Paris moved to Denver, and in 1997, launched his wardrobe consultation business, which has steadily grown and now includes some of Denver's top business and cultural leaders.

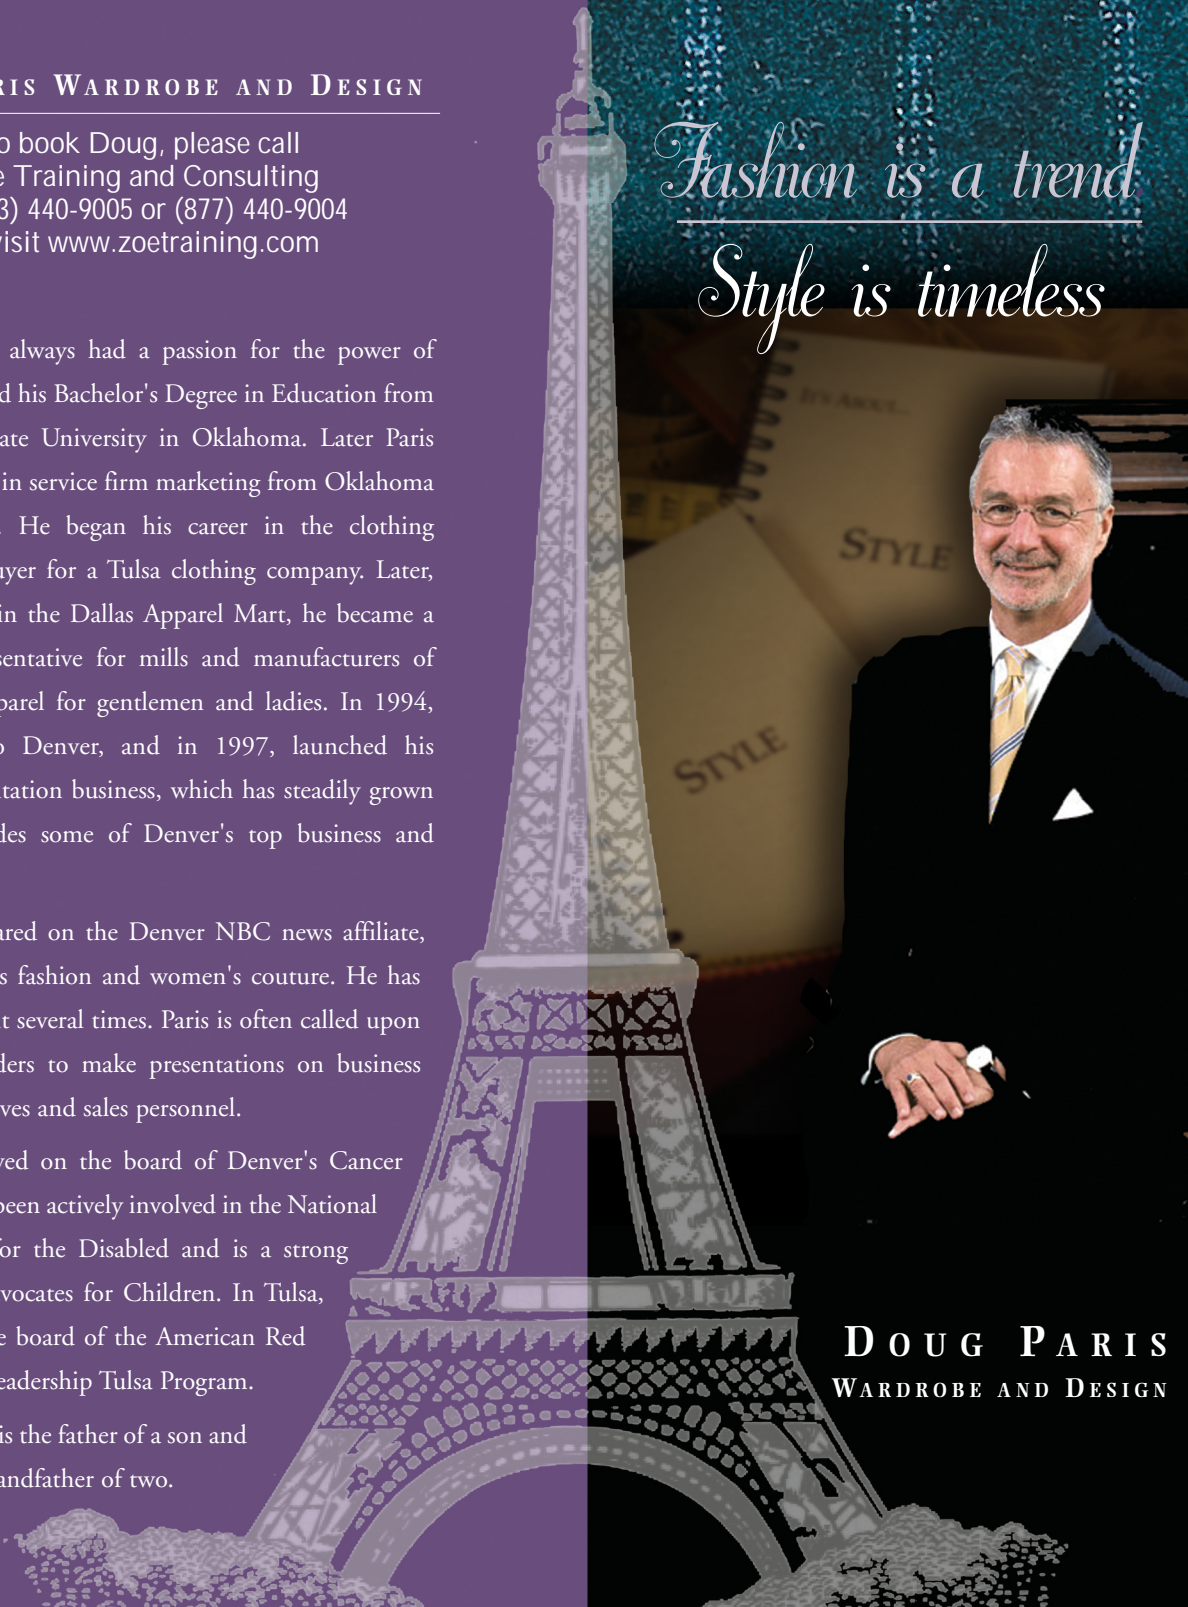

He has appeared on the Denver NBC news affiliate, presenting men's fashion and women's couture. He has appeared in print several times. Paris is often called upon by business leaders to make presentations on business attire for executives and sales personnel.

Paris has served on the board of Denver's Cancer League. He has been actively involved in the National Sports Center for the Disabled and is a strong supporter of Advocates for Children. In Tulsa, he served on the board of the American Red Cross and the Leadership Tulsa Program.

Divorced, he is the father of a son and daughter and grandfather of two.

ANDREW BOIAN
PROFESSOR, POLITICAL ADVISOR,
BUSINESS EXECUTIVE

Doug Paris says: “We all have a style. We have a presence that we’ve developed over the years. The trouble occurs when what we express through our wardrobe is at odds with what we want it to say about us. My job is to ensure that my clients’ wardrobe communicates the right message to the world. Whether we do that through the choice of styles, fabrics, designs -- or even couture design -- I always strive to ensure that their unique personality shines through.”
