TAP INTO THE NEW MILLENNIUM WORKPLACE WITH LIZ RYAN

When it comes to the New Millennium workplace, nobody tells it quite like Liz Ryan. Her edgy and often witty advice is sought by CEOs and employees alike who want to make the workplace more productive, more sane and ultimately, more humane.

A former Fortune 500 human resources executive, Liz is founder and CEO of the Ask Liz Ryan online community, which reaches more than 25,000 professionals on five continents to share business, career, marketing and “life” advice.

Liz also writes for Business Week and is the Yahoo! HotJobs networking expert. She is a commentator for NPR’s “Morning Edition” and for BBC Radio, and is a syndicated columnist on careers and the workplace.

Liz’s observations on the new millennium workplace, entrepreneurship and women in business have been featured by TIME, Fortune, The New York Times, USA Today and on CNN, CNBC and dozens of other national media outlets.

As an advisor to corporations on workplace and leadership issues, she has worked with Omnicom, Tyson Foods, General Electric, NBCi and a long list of global employers.

Liz’s workplace advice, job advice and networking columns reach million of readers every month in print and online.

A dynamic and entertaining public speaker, she speaks to CEOs, human resources leaders, entrepreneurs, diversity and women’s networks, and world leaders at the United Nations.

“Liz is a one-woman tidal wave of new ideas on how make the workplace better for people and how to make people better for the workplace. You never know what she’s going to say next, but I guarantee, you’ll be hitting yourself on the head, saying ‘why, oh why didn’t I think of THAT?’”

Tamara Greenleaf, Vice President, The Maverick Institute

Supporting Working People at the Intersection of Work and Life

In 1999, Liz launched her first online network, ChicWIT, for professional women in the Chicago area. ChicWIT grew to become WorldWIT, the world’s largest online network for professional women providing pithy, topical work and life advice, and in 2007, Liz launched the Ask Liz Ryan global community, a co-ed global discussion network among 25,000 professionals who share an interest in navigating the tricky waters of the post-millennium workplace with the help of Liz’s authoritatively warm, up-to-the-minute expert guidance.
